MARKET UPDATE – NEW SUBSTANTIAL HOLDER

Infigen Energy (ASX: IFN) met on 13 April 2018 with representatives of Brookfield Asset Management Inc. (“Brookfield”) to discuss their interest in Infigen Energy following its recent purchase of 9% of Infigen securities.

Chairman Len Gill said that the discussions were constructive and Infigen Energy is pleased to have Brookfield join the register as a strategic investor with a long term interest in Infigen.

“Brookfield can clearly bring significant value to our business because of their global experience in the renewable energy sector. They indicated their support for Infigen Energy and its business strategy and a willingness to assist us to identify options to create value for all security holders through growth”, Mr Gill said.

Mr Gill also noted discussions between Brookfield and Infigen Energy were exploratory and preliminary and may not lead to any outcomes. Mr Gill said that these discussions were consistent with earlier, initiatory approaches that Infigen had received from Brookfield to discuss their interest in becoming a strategic security holder and a potential capital partner. Infigen notes market speculation around an M&A transaction but advises that Brookfield has stated that, while obviously reserving their rights to alter their views in the future, particularly if a third party proposal were made, they have no current intention of making a takeover offer for Infigen Energy.
